started his career as a school teacher. He was admitted to the Kentucky bar in 1908 and was a great believer in the dignity and worth of the legal profession. He said, "I would rather be known as a fairly good lawyer than anything else in the world. The stability of government the world over is due to the profession of law." A lifelong friend of Senator Clements, he supported his campaigns for Governor of the state. He had served as Second District Highway Commissioner from 1932-36, and in December, 1947, became State Highway Commissioner. He served until January, 1949, when Mr. Clements, then Governor, appointed him to fill Senator Barkley's post. Between his term as Senator and as Representative, he had served in the Kentucky State Legislature (1951).
